Hope View Presbyterian Church

Hope View Church Soon To Be 25 Years Old

In a special service at Hope View Presbyterian Church, Sunday, May 30, Mrs. Joe S. Phipps gave the history of a movement that started with an idea and ended as a church:

"It was a hot summer evening in August, 1929, almost 25 years ago. The men of Buffalo Presbyterian Church, just recently organized what they called the Men of the Church, were having a fellowship supper on the lawn at the Phipps home on Yanceyville Road. A short business session followed the supper. H. A. Barnes, president of the newly formed group, presided. He asked the group to consider doing something worthwhile and suggested that they sponsor an outpost Sunday School in the White Oak Heights community where there was no church. Much discussion followed. Some of the men doubted the wisdom of such a movement, but the majority agreed to try it. "J. I. Medearis was selected as superintendent, and the following were selected to assist him: Miss Annie Pugh, Miss Mary Bangle, (now Mrs. Ralph Johansmann of Columbus, Ohio), Mrs. J. S. Phipps, and J. S. Phipps.

"A vacant store building was rented at the corner of Yanceyville Road and Pickard Avenue. As furnishings for the building, an organ was loaned to the group. Song books, Sunday School literature, chairs, and benches were brought from Buffalo, and curtains which could be drawn to provide Sunday School class rooms were placed on overhead wires which crossed and ran the length of the building.

"The people of the community were visited and invited to attend church services. The response was encouraging. Many came and some began to take an active part in the work. In addition to his duties as pastor of Buffalo Church, Rev. A. P. Dickson preached on Sunday afternoons and at nights occasionally and directed summer vacation bible school. A feeling of good will grew between the people of the outpost Sunday School and the congregation of Buffalo Church.

"A building fund was started which grew rather slowly due to the small congregation and to the economic conditions. A depression was on.

"In July of 1936, a lot was purchased on Pickard Avenue, and in September of that year, work was

Funeral Held For Former Ceasar Cone School Principal

Funeral was held on Thursday of last week for Miss Mary Stanley, retired principal of Ceasar Cone School. Miss Stanley, who had been in ill health for several years died on Tuesday, June 1 at a nursing home in Summerfield. She had retired in 1941.

The service was held at Forbis and Murray Chapel with Rev. Herschel Folger, pastor of Asheboro Street Friends Church, in charge. Burial was in New Garden Cemetery, Guilford County.

A Guilford County native, the retired principal was a member of the Asheboro Street Friends Church. She had attended Guilford College.

Miss Stanley served the old White Oak School as a seventh grade teacher for four years and then as principal for 24 years. Six years before she retired as principal, the school consolidated with the Revolution School and became known as Ceasar Cone School.

At one time during Miss Stanley's tenure as principal, she

Heiss Tells Fashion Group Fear of Buying Hurting Textiles

Marion W. Heiss, vice president of Cone Mills Corporation, told the Carolina-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors meeting last Sunday night in Charlotte that scare abstaining from buying (opposite of scare buying) has caused bad effects on the economic situation in general and particularly on the textile industry.

Stating that scare abstaining is equally as dangerous as scare buying, Mr. Heiss, urged the salesmen to impress on retailers that continuation of hand-to-mouth buying will mean lost sales and irreparable hurt.

"Too many people are ignoring the element of time required to transform fabric to garment, and sales are being lost. The time element between basic cloth in the mill warehouses and finished garments in retail stores is too great to catch sales."

Mr. Heiss predicted that natural fibers would always "reign supreme, but not solely in the states of single blessedness. The marriage of fibers will increase as the years roll by."

Stating that the era has been reached when people will more and more analyze the functional use of fabrics, he pointed out that the general public is going to evaluate fabrics on the basis of end use, regardless of contents.

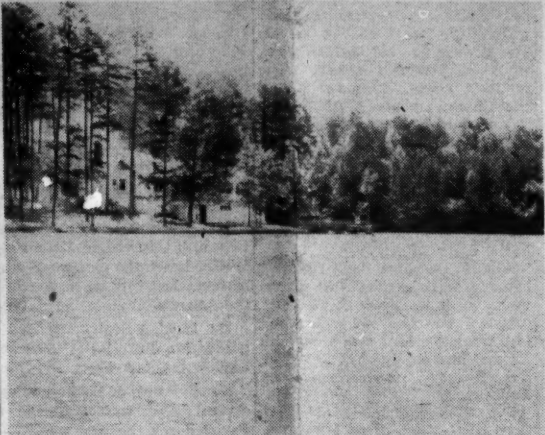

Fabric development is passing through one of its most pronounced revolutionary stages, and the honeymoon for gimmick fabrics which has hurt fabrics with true values

J. J. McSorley With Cone Mills Inc. 54 Yrs.

John J. McSorley, head of Cone Mills Inc. Printing Department (located in the Laboratory Building), last Saturday observed his 54th anniversary with the company.

The publicity-shy, Irish-witted Mr. Mac requested that no photograph of him appear in this connection. He prefers to celebrate his anniversaries in other ways. However, he did receive congratulatory flowers and notes during the week end, in spite of the fact that he had not advertised the event.

Mr. McSorley came to Greensboro in 1900 from Boston, Mass., by way of Pinehurst and Southern Pines, where he says, physicians had sent him to die.

The Greensboro which greeted this newcomer was a far-cry from that of today. In fact, it appeared to be just another small Southern country town, but different from most of the others in that it was awakening to the industrial development which contributed largely to making it what it is today.

Emerging from the train at the old South Elm Street station, J. J. McSorley was wearing a black Chesterfield coat and derby, a Yankee fashion so advanced to these parts that it was not the usual thing until several years later.

Crossing the cobblestone street, he checked in at Greensboro's most fashionable hostelry, the Clegg Hotel. Although this young (and he refuses to divulge how young) dandy appeared to be a man-of-the-world, he says that he was just being cautious about those to whom he displayed his ignorance of this town's affairs.

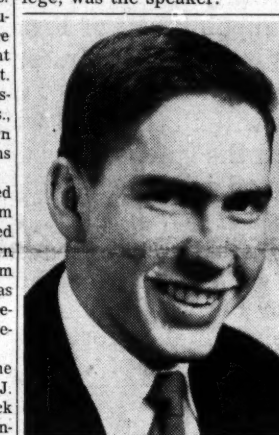

He refrained from asking questions of intelligent-looking people in order not to appear dumb right at first.

There was one thing in particular he wanted to know as he gazed at the shiny streetcar tracks stretching on down the cobblestone Elm Street: What was the schedule of the vehicle of transportation?

So biding his time until a fairly

He was president of the 1954 senior class and a member of the student council. Roland plans to enter Elon College next fall and study for the ministry. A member of Gibsonville Christian Church, he has a perfect attendance record at the Sunday School for the past 15 years. His father is an assistant overseer in the Spinning Department at Minneola and his mother is employed in the same department.

Carroll, assistant overseer of Beaming and Slashing at White Oak Plant; Thomas Coffer, Cone Mills Laboratory; William N. Lilly, Cone Mills Laboratory; Arnold Melvin, Print Works Plant; James Patton, Jr., Cone Mills Laboratory; W. J. Two Splendid Appointments

It is believed the two most recent appointments by Governor William B. Umstead will be accepted with a great deal of enthusiasm by people in North Carolina.

The Governor used splendid judgement in selecting Associate Justice Sam J. Ervin to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Clyde R. Hoey. Judge Ervin is recognized by his fellow lawyers as being outstanding as a jurist. Many are lamenting the fact that he is now being lost as a member of the State Supreme court but are more than gratified over the fact that he is so admirably suited to fill the important post in the United States Senate.

He is considered an experienced legislator and an outstanding citizen and statesman. He will unquestionably add dignity and wisdom to the United States Senate and will reflect credit upon the state of North Carolina.

No Commissioner of Labor in the entire country has equaled the high respect and admiration held by the late Forrest H. Shuford. The Governor's appointment of Frank Crane to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Shuford was a fortunate one in our opinion. We believe that Mr. Crane will fill that post well and will carry forward the splendid principles of fairness and good judgement which exemplified the services of Mr. Shuford.

Although we will mourn the loss of those two great men, Senator Clyde R. Hoey and Commissioner of Labor Forrest H. Shuford, we can consider ourselves indeed fortunate in the selection of their successors.

Cone Denims Price Remains Unchanged

Cone Mills Inc. announces the offering of denims for shipment through September at the unchanged basis of 36 cents per yard for 28/29" eight ounce sanforized. This price was named on December 2, 1953 for first quarter shipment and on March 1, 1954, was restated for April-May-June delivery.

In the meantime cotton costs have increased more than 1½ cents per pound, and there is still full justification for an advance at this time. However, the 36 cents price basis is being renamed for third quarter shipment in an effort to stabilize the situation and to add incentive to forward commitments at the various levels of manufacture and distribution.

It is believed that this move will encourage full production that appears necessary in order to provide sufficient made-up stocks to fill the heavy demand during July, August and September for Fall requirements, back-to-school and harvest needs.

ley's principalship, the local school, under the Guilford County Superintendent Thomas Foust and Cone Mills superintendent, Bernard M. Cone, was the largest elementary school in North Carolina.

While a teacher, Miss Stanley taught under the principalship of Mrs. P. W. Glidewell, the former Mrs. Glenn Hudson.

The present retiring principal of Cesar Cone School, Miss Florida Johnson, stated that Miss Stanley had always been proud of her school and the achievements of the students. She recalled that Miss Stanley was a great force in welding together the Cone Mills communities when the two local schools were consolidated.

Miss Stanley is survived by several nieces and nephews. One nephew, Stanley Moore of Winston-Salem, she reared from infancy.

HEISS TELLS FASHION

Mr. Heiss said the wash and wear program is not a passing fancy and the natural fibers, in blends with synthetics, are destined to give the housewife what she desires in ease of living.

In stating that cotton would remain king he pointed out that "with his frequent marriages and the treatment he will be given, the old boy is not what he used to be—he is better."

In speaking of the confusion in the world foreign trade activities, Mr. Heiss said that the general public has a false illusion that the United States textile industry can offset any wage differential in world manufacturing.

"We cannot remain competitive with our present standard of living," he said, "and we cannot afford to sacrifice our textile industry on the altar of free trade."

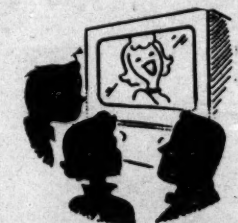

HOPE VIEW CHURCH

started on a church which consisted of an auditorium and four Sunday School classrooms. Times were hard and money was scarce, so the people volunteered to work without pay. Finally, although the building was not completed, it was usable and the congregation moved into the church on Easter Sunday, 1937; and at services that morning they decided to call the new church Buffalo Chapel.

"Nearly every year after this, through 1949, undergraduate ministerial students from the Union Theological Seminary at Richmond, Virginia, came to work during the summer months at Buffalo Chapel under the direction of Rev. Mr. Dickson.

"Rev. R. K. Davenport came to Buffalo Chapel as its first supply pastor in November of 1949. This position he held until illness forced him to stop work in January, 1951.

Dr. Charles M. Ramsay was the second supply pastor and he came in September, 1951.

"January 20, 1952, the congregation voted to become an organized Presbyterian Church and the name chosen was Hope View. Hope View Presbyterian Church was now growing and its Sunday School space was inadequate. Mrs. J. A. Ham gave an adjoining lot to the church, and on Sunday, May 31, 1953, ground was broken for a religious educational building, 30 feet wide and 60 feet long, two stories high and consisting of six Sunday School class rooms, a fellowship hall and a kitchen. This building is of brick, cinder block construction and is in keeping with the church, which is brick veneer.

"The congregation is very proud of the new building and they wish to thank the following persons who were so kind and considerate in helping: Rev. Mr. Dickson, Rev. T. Henry Patterson, Dr. Charles M. Ramsay, Mrs. J. A. Ham, H. A. Barnes, R. H. Souther, E. W. Fishburne, and the congregation of Buffalo Church; Cesar Cone, E. L. Jones, J. C. Cummings, Don Hawkins, Buck King, Worth Murry and Lindsay Hobbs.

"During the last 25 years, Buffalo also started two other outpost Sunday Schools which have also become organized churches. They are Guilford Park Presbyterian Church and Memorial Presbyterian Church."

J. J. McSORLEY WITH

unintelligent-looking countryman came plodding along, he put the question to him.

"Well, Sonny," said the codger, "I can't tell you when the streetcar will be back, but I can tell you that the last one went by five years ago."

And he was right! Those tracks which had formerly furnished mule-drawn transportation to the old Cone finishing mill on Wendover Avenue, were no longer in use in 1900. They were abandoned in 1895.

So John J. McSorley went to work in the old Cone Export and Commission Company office, located just about where Kay's Jewelry Store is now.

When he arrived, he was set to the task of sorting and cataloging four years' accumulation of files of the company, packed in boxes in the attic. A big skylight allowed plenty of warm southern sun to pour in on those Yankee shoulders.

But evidently that and all that followed agreed with Mr. Mac, because he's in his office today with an uncommon gleam in his eye and an unprecedented quip on his lips.
